III. 5-day Spirituality and Health Research Workshop (August 12-16)

Register for our 20th annual 5-day onsite Duke University summer research workshop to be held in-person. For more information, see <https://spiritualityandhealth.duke.edu/index.php/5-day-summer-research-course/>. For an article on how to obtain research training on religion, spirituality and health, specifically with regard to this workshop, go to: <https://rdcu.be/ceFH4>.

As usual, our faculty this year come from Duke, Yale, and University of Pennsylvania, and includes physicians, theologians, nurses, and chaplains with extensive research and clinical experience in quantitative and qualitative research. The workshop compresses material presented in our past 2-year post-doctoral fellowship into 5 days, and is the only place in the world where specific training on how to conduct research on religion, spirituality & health can be obtained from researchers active in the field for nearly 40 years. We recommend this courses for researchers early in their career and for seasoned researchers wishing to shift their work into spirituality & health, as well as for undergraduate and graduate students working on their dissertations or others considering research in this area. Those more generally interested in spirituality and health will also find the workshop useful and inspiring, as we cover a lot of material applicable to laypersons and clergy. This is the 19th year the workshop is being offered, with more than 1000 attendees over the years.

Tuition discounts ($200) are also available for APC members and for members of other professional societies (for those not applying for a scholarship).

The 5-day workshop has been previously approved for 32.5 continuing medical education credits from Duke School of Medicine, and while it currently provides no CME or CEU, many attendees have gotten their certifying bodies to approve the course for CME/CEU based on the course syllabus and prior approval. The Association of Professional Chaplains (APC) has previously indicated that this educational event provides 30.5 hours of continuing education that can be applied to the educational hours required by the Board of Chaplaincy Certification, Inc.
