Overview

- I. Definition and importance of prosody
- II. Placement of pauses
- III. Pitch change and focus
- IV. Online Resources in a variety of languages

I. The importance of prosody

Prosody includes using volume, tempo, rhythm and pitch changes to convey the structure and meaning of a speaker's message

English speakers' use of prosody can include:

- Showing emphasis, contrast, and semantic focus
- Conveying emotional states such as excitement, happiness, empathy and irritation
- Signaling that they are voicing a statement, a question, or command

(Murphy, 2017, p. 31-32)

II. Pauses and thought groups

We use pauses to break long utterances into shorter chunks (thought groups) to make them easier to understand.

(Grant, 2014, p. 17)

A thought group

- Has pauses before and after
- Has a grammatical structure
- Has meaning

Activity: Listening for Thought Groups

You will hear an excerpt from a speech by Nikki Haley, ambassador to the United Nations, given March 7, 2018 at Duke.

Draw a slash between thought groups whenever you hear a pause.

“But the biggest difference, by far, between governor and being ambassador is the nature of the opposition.”

II. Pitch Change and Focus

Focus is the use of pitch contours and vowel lengthening to highlight important information for listeners (Jones, 2016, p. xv).

- Shows emphasis
- Signals new information in a sentence
- Highlights contrasts

Focus words

- Each thought group will usually have at least one focus word
- Focus words sound different by:
 - Lengthening of the stressed vowel
 - Pitch change within focus word
 - Volume

Focus Words

But the biggest difference, / by far, /between governor and being ambassador/ is the nature of the opposition.

Listening for thought groups and focus

You know people sometimes ask me the biggest difference between being Governor of South Carolina and being the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations. Well, there's the little stuff. The pace is different-- New York is a city that truly never sleeps. The people are different. Everyone talks very fast, even faster than me. And the weather is way worse. But the biggest difference, by far, between governor and being ambassador, is the nature of the opposition.

Another example: a dialog

A: Hey, what's up?

B: Not much. Studying.

A: Studying what? Statistics?

B: No, Biology. What are you studying?

A: Economics. I have a midterm tomorrow.

B: Oh, good luck!

Tools to help feel or visualize English prosody
