

Robert Almelor Delfeld

Robert is a research associate with The Marathon Initiative, a think tank focused on great power competition, where he works primarily on geoeconomic and political economy issues. He also consults for several private advisory firms, specializing in regulated industries, and worked previously as an analyst for a boutique public affairs consulting firm, where he produced strategic recommendations for clients that included members of the Fortune 20.

Delfeld helped author the previous Marathon study “Sharing the Load: Developing Better Strategies for Burden Sharing” for the Department of Defense’s Defense Threat Reduction Agency (DTRA), and is leading a forthcoming Marathon project on defense industrial base reform. His writing has appeared in American Affairs, National Review, and The American Conservative. Delfeld is a graduate of Williams College.