

CAPT Trevor Grant, USN

CAPT Trevor Grant is currently serving as Fleet Judge Advocate at U.S. Pacific Fleet. Pacific Fleet is the world's largest fleet command, encompassing 100 million square miles, nearly half the Earth's surface, from Antarctica to the Arctic Circle and the West Coast of the United States to the Indian Ocean. The fleet consists of approximately 200 ships, 1500 aircraft, and 150,000 military and civilian personnel.

CAPT Grant is a native of Charlottesville, Virginia. He commissioned through the United States Naval Academy as a Surface Warfare Officer. He served on board the guided missile destroyer USS ROSS (DDG 71) and the aircraft carrier USS RONALD REAGAN (CVN 76).

CAPT Grant was selected for the Navy's Law Education Program and became a member of the Judge Advocate General's Corps after earning his law degree at the University of Virginia. He has a masters of law degree in International and Operational Law from the Army Judge Advocate General's School.

He has served two tours at the Pentagon, most recently as the Director of the Navy's National Security Law Division within the Office of the Judge Advocate General, and a previous assignment as the Legal Advisor to the Director of the Navy Staff.

CAPT Grant's joint tours include U.S. Indo-Pacific Command in Aiea, Hawaii, where he served as the Principal Deputy and Chief of National Security Law, and at U.S. Special Operations Command Central in Tampa, Florida, where he was the Deputy for Operational Law.

CAPT Grant's overseas assignments include Naval Forces Europe/Naval Forces Africa/U.S. SIXTH Fleet in Naples, Italy, and a Special Operations Task Force in Mazar-e-Sharif, Afghanistan.

He has also had multiple leadership positions within Navy Legal Service Command.

CAPT Grant is a member of the bar in the Commonwealth of Virginia. He resides with his wife and two children in Kailua, Hawaii.
